

Press kit

A concise public dossier for editors, curators, and collaborators. This version is intentionally compact and can be expanded later with publication history, exhibitions, and editions.

Studio overview

Monochrome photographs shaped by distance, witness, reflection, and brief forms of human nearness.

STILLMRK moves through thresholds, shorelines, winter roads, and open ground where a person can appear small without disappearing.

Made across different places and years, the photographs are held together by recurrence rather than chronology. Trees return as witnesses, water reflects what cannot be kept, and weather reduces the frame to relation: between figure and land, solitude and the brief forms of solidarity that interrupt it.

Practice note

The site pairs images with restrained narrative cues so the sequence can deepen without over-explaining the frame. New work belongs here only when it strengthens the language of threshold, witness, reflection, winter passage, or nearness.

Current public series

- Thresholds - entry pressure, walls of light, wet pavement, railings, and doorways.
- Witness Horizon - open ground, water, trees, and distant figures held near the edge of recognition.
- Weathered Nearness - rain, transit, weather, and the unstable promise of shelter.
- Winter Passage - snow, reduction, and the changed shape of nearness when another body enters the frame.
- Stage Presence - a smaller counter-sequence built around lit floorboards, exposure, and performance space.

STILLMRK / SHORT BIO

Short biography

A text block that can be copied into festival notes, editorial captions, or exhibition materials.

Pooria Moozarm Nia is a monochrome photographer based in Manchester, United Kingdom. STILLMRK unfolds as a paced sequence rather than a loose feed of images. Roads, shorelines, reflections, winter fields, trees, and weather recur across the work because they keep changing the visible weight of distance. The photographs are made across different places and years, but they are held together by one recurring condition: how a body remains present inside separation, exposure, and brief forms of human nearness.

Editorial use

This press kit is a live placeholder with real public-facing content. Replace it later with finalized publication credits, exhibition history, selected images, and any approved portrait or studio details once those materials are ready.

Selected image notes

Work	Editorial note
Threshold Walker	Sometimes walking is sadder than grief looks from the outside.
Mirror Shore	Bare, but never vacant.
Framed Silence	Some places hold solitude. Others measure it.
Storm Mirror	Water gave the image back, but never completely.
